

PLOWSHARES INTO SWORDS

Weaponized Knowledge, Liberal Order, and the League of Nations

DAVID EKBLADH

Jeremy Adelman, Princeton University: “Ekbladh’s research is astonishing and the significance of his findings is vital for readers today. His book is not just a model of international history, but a powerful reminder of the importance of information and knowledge in the making of the modern world, even in an age of heightened nationalism.”

Daive Rodogno, The Graduate Institute, Geneva: “Ekbladh’s telling of the League of Nations’ life and afterlife is refreshing. It is a story of economic and political knowledge that intertwines the domestic and the international. His archival work is precise and his writing is sober, sharp, and accessible.”

DAVID EKBLADH is associate professor of history at Tufts University.
